1) Question:

As this is a new response format for solicitations, please verify that the only expectation for both the technical response, as well as the pricing response will be the two google forms linked in Section 8.0. No additional materials will be submitted electronically or in print to any government address or location.

Answer:

Correct, the expectation is to submit both Google Forms.

2) Question:

With pagination on the Technical Response Form, it is unclear what information will be required to complete it. As it is unable to be saved in-flight, can the government provide the complete list and format of the technical response elements to facilitate response?

Answer:

No data will be submitted until the final page of the form. As a result, you can use placeholder text for any required fields in order to see the next page.

3) Question:

Private repositories are accepted, but the Government must be provided access to the repository. This is typically done by creating a temporary account with access to the repository and providing that account's credentials in the Google Form.

4) Question:

According to the PWS, we are able to develop the licensing inventory using any approved GSA programming language. Is that correct?

Answer:

No, under 9.2, only Python, Ruby, or Javascript will be accepted as languages for the application.

5) Question:

When we click on the technical response form link provided in Section 8 of the RFQ, we can only view the first screen without responding. Can the GSA provide a document with all screens so we can properly set up our response for ease of entry and Government review?

Answer:

No data will be submitted until the final page of the form. As a result, you can use placeholder text for any required fields in order to see the next page.

All other terms and conditions apply and the quotation due date remains unchanged, November 17, 2017 by 4:00 pm.
